

NEET Case Study

You could be

Prospect Training Services (PTS) has been recognised as the number one training provider for individuals not in education, employment or training (NEET) in Gloucestershire. This is due to our European Social Funded (ESF) NEET contract, designed to support 15-24-year-olds who are at risk of leaving school or work.

PTS has delivered many programmes under the ESF NEET contract in schools and training centres across Gloucestershire. We recently received feedback from one of our contacts at Tewkesbury School regarding our You Could Be programme, which is covered under this contract.

Sarah Baird, the career advisor and librarian at the school, commented:

“The You Could Be programme has given a number of our less-engaged students a new outlook on education and how they approach their studies. The Level 1 Grit and Resilience course has armed our students with new coping strategies and how they view the world and its challenges. Students are grateful for the opportunity to add a qualification to their CVs and have started thinking more about employability skills. The course has allowed students to see the value of education and has given them more direction and focus.

Since completing the Level 1 Grit and Resilience Course, one of our students at Tewkesbury School has applied for a Beauty Course at Gloucestershire College. She feels proud of this achievement and has valuable techniques to guide her through life. Despite the challenges she has faced in her home life, the course has enabled her to overcome her issues and develop a more positive outlook.

The tutors at Prospect Training Services are fantastic at developing positive and encouraging relationships with our students. Candidates look forward to the weekly sessions and have been noticeably more confident and self-assured by the end of the programme.

Thank you to PTS for allowing our students to develop their resilience and learn essential life skills, strengthening their resolve and determination to succeed. The tutors have developed strong and nurturing working relationships, which have enabled our learners to thrive and gain confidence in themselves.”
